Purpose

To strengthen the professional skills of agricultural lenders and other credit managers. Attending the school is an important step in the career development of agricultural lenders. The Department of Economics in the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Iowa State University, in cooperation with the Iowa Bankers Association, conducts the Agricultural Credit School each June.

School Format

The school is organized in a two-week curriculum. Enrollees attend one week during the first summer and complete the remaining week during the subsequent summer. Both curricula are offered concurrently and the second year class is limited to those who have completed the first year.

Who Should Attend

Those directly involved in extending, administering or supervising agricultural credit or those aspiring to serve as agriculture lenders.

Class Limits & Experience Recommendation

Registrations will be taken in the order they are received. The first year class is limited to 60. Anyone interested in the school may attend, however, two to three years of experience in agricultural lending would be beneficial.

Planning and Direction

The Ag Credit School combines coursework, case studies, computer applications and in-depth attention from instructors.

Benefits:

- Increase your skill and effectiveness in agricultural credit management
- Learn how to attract and finance new credits
- Gain an in-depth understanding of farm financial and risk management
- Learn strategies to increase the profitability, security and competitiveness of agricultural lending

The following people are responsible for the planning and direction of the school:

- Alejandro Plastina, Department of Economics, Iowa State University
- Don Foley, Ag Credit School Coordinator, Iowa Bankers Association
- Maggie Klocke, Education Coordinator, Iowa Bankers Association
